Photography Awards Call for Photographers

A' International Photography Award & Competition calls for photographers worldwide to enter their best photographs for award consideration.

Call for Entries : Photography Awards
A' Design Award & Competition announced that the A' International Photography Award (IPGA) is now accepting submissions. Photographers worldwide are called to submit their best photographs by February 28 annually. Entries will be accepted from both amateur and professional photographers as well as creative and advertising agencies. Photographers are permitted to digitally enhance or manipulate their photos. Entrants are not restricted by a predefined theme or perspective. Unlike other photography contests which consider a single photograph for award consideration the IPGA award requires photographers to submit a set of five relevant photos that share the same theme and qualities.

Evaluation of Entries

Photographers could submit their entries in sub-categories such as Advertising Photography, Architecture Photography, Abstract Photography, Fine-Art Photography, Nature Photography, Still Life Photography, Fashion Photography, Editorial Photography and People Photography. Furthermore there is a special category that is open to entries of any other photographic works. The IPGA photography contest is judged by leading experts who represent various aspects of the photography and design profession. The composition of the jury is changed from year to year to ensure fair and balanced judging procedure. The jury panel is composed of academics, photographers, designers and press members who will follow strict guidelines when voting entries. Entries are peer reviewed and anonymously judged. The decision of the jury shall be final.

A' Photography Prize

All award winners will be given the A' Prize which includes a series of PR and publicity services as well as the award trophy, yearbook and certificate of achievement. Each year, A' Design Award & Competition will invite an established curator to organize a special exhibition of best works. Winners of the IPGA awards will have their photographs printed in A2 and exhibited in the annual exhibition in Italy. In addition to exhibition, all winning works will be published in the high-quality, full-color, hardcover annual of best designs. Laureates of the A' Photography Awards will gain global media coverage and true international exposure. Each award winning work will have its description translated to more than twenty languages and receive complimentary press release preparation and distribution service to reach tens of thousands of editors worldwide. Winners will also be invited to join the Gala-Night and Award Ceremony in Italy. There will be five different distinctions: Platinum, Gold, Silver, Bronze and Iron. The number of photography awards will depend on the number of award worthy entries.

Applications & Deadline

The deadline for entries is February 28th of each year, and the results will be announced on April 15 annually. Photographs that have already been published will also be accepted. Photographs taken in the last 10 years could be submitted for award consideration. Photographers are suggested to submit a series of images that cover the same theme. Entries must include a high-resolution main signature image plus four other images. The A' Photography Awards are organized under two phases, participation to first phase is free and photographers are required to upload their works for preliminary selection. Works that pass the elimination round can proceed with nomination. Photos can be in color or black and white. Since entries will be anonymously judged, submitted photos must be clear of any copyright information so that the identity of participants is not revealed; watermarks are not allowed. It is important that the photographers must own all rights to any photographs submitted to the International A' Photography Award. This includes, but is not limited to, the documented consent of identifiable human beings i.e. model release and integration or embedment of any other intellectual property. Photographs submitted could have won the overall award of any other major global competition; photographs that have previously won an award will be accepted.

About the International Photography Award

The A' International Photography Awards are annually organized to highlight best photographers regardless of their status or past achievements. Entries are open for professional, non-professional, and student photographers on a global scale. The A' Photography Awards were established to support and cultivate photographic culture worldwide by highlighting the most outstanding photography achievements annually. Award winning photographers will get fame, prestige, credibility and international reach.
